NORWAY AND VICINITY
Mothers' Meeting.
The Mothers' Meeting was held in Grange Hall Wednesday. Owing to the weather and some uncertainty as to whether it was to be held, the attendance was small.
The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. H. L. Bartlett, who resigned her position. As she was very positive, her resignation was finally accepted and Mrs. E. F. Bicknell chosen to fill the office.
Some interesting stories were read by Mrs. Cummings. Mrs. C. A. Stephens read a paper on child study which was listened to very attentively. As we hope it will be published in some of our papers we will not attempt to speak further of it here.
Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by the ladies present.
The next meeting will be at Mrs. F. N.
Barker's Wednesday, Dec. 3. There are a number of questions to be answered and it will presumably be a very interesting meeting. All mothers are invited to come to these meetings. We surely need all the help we can get in the bringing up of our children.

Now in His 99th Year.

David Young Observes His Birthday at North Paris—Has Always Been a Hard Worker, and Still Keeps Busy—Enthusiast on Marriage.

David Young, the survivor of a family remarkable for its longevity, celebrated his 98th birthday, Tuesday, at his home in North Paris. His father lived to reach his 80th birthday, while his mother, who was Chloe Cummings of Topsfield, Mass., also lived to a ripe old age.
The elder served in the battle of Bunker Hill and during the war of Independence served in the quota from Dedham, Mass.

This couple, Nathaniel and Chloe, came to Norway about 1830, fifteen children were born of the marriage.
David and his twin brother Jared were born at this little place, Nov. 24, 1804.
Jared lived to be 89, and David bids fair to reach the limit he fixes in his mind, 102 years. There would make him the oldest of the family, his brother Nathaniel having died at Linneus at the age of 100 years, 1 month.

David Young has been twice married, and the following children of the first marriage survive: Wilmington D. Young of Lynn, born 1836; Annie E. (Young) Morse of North Paris, who now takes care of him; Louise J. (Young) West of Jamaica Plain, Mass.; and Freeland
Young of Norway, a veteran of 1861.
Mr. Young lived 15 years with his first wife and 55 with his second. He declares that the best act of his life was marrying his first wife, and the second of importance was accomplished when he was united to his second helpmate.

He has spent the last 48 years in North Paris, where he is one of the most esteemed citizens. He can read without glasses, walks erect as a man of 40, and can take a 10-mile walk or a 20-mile drive with enjoyment.

He was never under the care of a doctor until he was past 90, and then the cause was minor. This fall he has sawed, split and piled several cords of wood in his own shed and carried another cord on a wheelbarrow to the house of a neighbor. He has always been a hard working man and says that it agrees with him, that the lazy ones go quick.
He uses no liquor or tobacco, and is a Universalist.

David Young cast his first vote for Gen. Jackson, who, he thinks, was the best of all the Presidents, "though Lincoln was a pretty good one, and Mc-Kinley did well for a young man. I do not vote any more for a President, I do think he is doing as well as he knows how."

Uncle David passed his 98th birthday very happily at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Annie Morse. The relatives present were, his daughter, Mrs. Jennie West; his son, Freeland Young, and wife; two nephews, Charles and Fred Young, a great-nephew, Lucy Barrow, Mrs. Hiram Chase, aged 88, was one of the invited guests.

Mr. Young is a man beloved by all.
He thinks he will live to vote for the next President. We hope he may.

ness, Saturday.

ered a first-class teacher.

Congregational church Sunday, in order that there might be no danger of spreading scarlatina. The sessions will be held as usual, next Sunday.

Evelyn P. Partridge closed her school on Pike's Hill, Nov. 21. Bertha Frost and Archie Goodwin were not absent a half day nor tardy during the entire term. The percentage of attendance was 98%, and only two pupils were tardy.

Yaggar schoolhouse, Friday, Nov. 21,

A Pleasant Summer Home.

A Visit to Mountain View Stock Farm—Account of the Appearance and Improvement of J. Frank Howland's Summer Place—A Large and New Stable Recently Built.

In the ADVERTISER of Nov. 9, 1900, was an illustration and description of the buildings at Mountain View Stock Farm, the country residence of J. Frank Howland of the Walter Baker Company, Ltd., Boston. Since that time changes and improvements have been made under the direction of the owner, and the most elaborate one is the erection of a large new stable for accommodating the many horses the farm supports.

ADVERTISER representatives recently visited the farm and were courteously shown over the buildings both within and without. From the highways as we approached we had glimpses of the buildings at the high land where they stand, and as we approached we could but notice how well the colors of the structures blended with the landscape, making a tasteful picture.

Past the residence of the superintendent, a commodious and comfortable farmhouse, the road leads ever upward and at a bend not a sharp angle the main buildings stand at some distance from and above the road.

All the buildings are painted a dark red with wide trimmings which are white. A broad roofed veranda runs across the south side and along the wing of the main building. The veranda has been built, which is very pleasant and from which a charming and extended view may be had.

The house is a splendid specimen of the style of architecture in vogue early in the last century, and most of the rooms have fireplaces. Noticeable is the den or office room of the owner, on the southwest corner, overlooking the valley. The furniture is plain and homelike and the idea of comfort is suggested everywhere. Several large pictures adorn the walls upon a background of unique paper, representing an English fox hunt. The squire and attendants ride, following the hounds in full cry, with Reynard brought to bay with the leaders.

Another unique figured paper is on the dining-room walls, representing idealized figures gathering fruit. The fireplace in this room accommodates a four-foot stick and one can look upward through the chimney to the sky above. The kitchen is modern, hot and cold water, and spring water come in through pipes where of most use, and the department is equipped with conveniences for the cook.

The chambers are pleasant with charming outlook. There is no window that does not command a pleasing view. The rooms are neatly and comfortably fitted up. There are sixteen rooms in the house.

The energies and plans this year have been centered in the new stable, which has been built. This covers a floor space of 40x100 feet, and is located where the old one stood, that one having been moved. A cellar was built which was situated removing the ledge to the depth of four feet. It is 8 feet in the clear and under the whole stable. All the wall is laid in cement and is what is termed solid masonry. The material not needed in building the wall was hauled away and is the foundation for a roadway below the house from the buildings to the street. It is several hundred feet in length.

The first floor of the new building has a sixteen foot carriage way with suitable allowance for the horse and carriage. The basement, a harness room and a grain room both built with matched lumber on sides and ceiling, the latter having boxes connected by spouts to bins on the floor above. Beyond these on the west side and also running the full length of the easterly side are box stalls, nine and twelve in number on their respective sides. These are each 8x11 feet and are lined both sides and top with hard pine sheathing. A good sized window is provided but ventilation is given by registers opening into air boxes which run the length of building next the sides and in turn have openings to the air. Drainage is provided by narrow gutters in the floor of each stall running to the rear and an iron gutter laid across the end with small openings to the cellar. There are double doors leading to each stall and when finished, it was not fully completed when we were there, will have heavy brass hinges and fastenings hung on half round jambs. Between the doors outside the stalls the space is filled with hard pine sheathing and finish. The mows project two feet over the carriage way, also ceiling with hard pine sheathing, and are covered in the same. The mows will hold a large quantity of hay, and the ambition of the proprietor is to fill them full. A cupola gives ventilation and also affords an extended view of the surrounding country. The building is 17 feet post and the ridge pole is about 34 to 36 feet from the ground.

The old barn was moved back 135 feet or so and setting directly back of the house and will be used for the cattle, a house and good butter makers. A creamery building has been added to the list of improvements on the farm this season. It is north of the stock barn and adjoining and contains modern cream raising appliances.

There are eighteen or twenty good bred horses on the farm. American Law 33,697 and Violette Wilkes stand at the head of the string of horses. There are five fillies, one yearling, two 2-year-olds and a 3-year-old; also a span of matched driving horses, six brood mares, three drivers and a handsome powerful pair of heavy work horses.

American Law was foaled in 1896 by Heir-at-Law out of Florence Chimes. Both of these have high records. American Law is 15½ hands high and weighs 1,025. He has never raced but has shown quarters in thirty-five seconds. Lady Wilkes has shown quarters in forty seconds, was foaled in 1898 and is a bay.

The superintendent is A. W. Andrews of Sharon, Mass. but is managing the farm only a short time. He is managing the affairs in a satisfactory manner. General supervision is done by Mrs. Cora E. Whitmore, who has been housekeeper for about three years. She manages the house and carries out the wishes of the owner in a very pleasing way. As of the owner in a very pleasing way. From the farm and are busy at work most of the time. The work of building has been done by Philip S. Mason of Paris with a crew of eight or nine men, who has carried out the year Mr. Howland's frequent visits to the farm. He and his family—wife and daughter—usually spend three or four months the summer here, accompanied by many of their city friends, who enjoy the scenery, the drives and country life with them.

We present to our readers a very fair picture of Mr. Howland on the first page of this paper and express the wish of all his country friends and neighbors that he and his may live long and enjoy his summer home at Mountain View Farm.

Plain Tale Without Trimmings of the Doings of an Oxford County Quartet of Nimrods—Aged Bear Gives Up the Ghost—Infant Bruin Dies, Too—The Fox Crop of Maine.
(Edited by O. Warren Brown.)

This is a plain, unvarnished tale of the experiences of a quartet of hunters from Buckfield, Andover and Ridonville, and their first encounter with a bear and cub. They returned from their trip a few days since, unscathed and somewhat elated, and John Stalkford, the burly blacksmith and hero of the slaughter, holds a sort of mortgage on Andover since his return.

The quartet left Rumford Falls Monday morning, Nov. 10, at 6 o'clock on the freight train and comprised Willis McGuire, barber, Ridonville; Albert Shaw, farmer, Buckfield; John Stalkford, blacksmith, Andover; N. L. Keene, locomotive engineer on the R. F. & R. L. R., residing in Ridonville. They arrived at Houghton at 8.30 a. m. and proceeded to hunt for deer, moose or game of any old kind.

They first moved down along Swift river and hunted through the woods for 1½ miles until 1 o'clock. They had no good luck and then went up the Houghton branch to the end of the line. Then they voted to take separate ways and drum up some game. All at once three of the party were startled by the discharge of a rifle in rapid succession in the direction of Sabbath Day Pond ¾ of a mile distant. The trio started in the direction of the sound and saw Stalkford swinging his rifle in high glee. At his feet lay the carcass of a sho bear weighing 150 pounds and a small cub weighing perhaps 75 pounds. He said he was descending a steep bank and in a ravine four rods distant he espied the bear and off-spring quietly feeding. He had been a hunter and trapper in the woods for 15 years and had never encountered Bruin before.

He fired a single shot whereupon the bear rose on her hind legs and showed fight. John's hair sort of stood on end, but he pumped another shot into the infuriated beast which seemed to take effect as she fell and the cub darted for a birch tree which it proceeded to climb with great agility. He continued shooting at the bear to satisfy himself that she was not "playing possum" and then chased the youngster up the tree, which crawled up 20 feet and took shelter far out on a limb.

The cub was cute, and continually placed itself on the opposite side of the trunk of the tree when John tried to get a head on it. Finally after he had practically exhausted his ammunition, the cub gave up the ghost and John left his booty there and returned to camp.

Tuesday morning, the quartet arose early and dressed the bear which was about 5 years old. The railroad section consented to take the carcasses to Houghton station. The cub was presented to Shaw who took it to Buckfield supposedly to have it mounted. Stalkford had the bear transferred to Andover where it was placed on exhibition. Afterward he sold the fur, and distributed a portion of the meat among his friends.

The quartet left the woods Wednesday noon, having shot two deer in the meantime near Brimstone mountain. One, a big doe, 170 pounds, was shot Tuesday night and a small buck, 75 pounds, Wednesday morning at 7.30 o'clock. Engineer Keene took the smaller animal to Ridonville, and the larger one, McGuire transported to Ridonville. There they were dressed for eating. The two bears were shot with a Savage rifle, 303-calibre, the smaller deer with a Winchester 35-55 and the larger with a Winchester 30-40 box magazine, owned by Willis McGuire. The quartet have never shot in company before, but their huge success has stimulated them to make a second journey in the near future.

The hunting in the vicinity of Will Holt's Indian Rock camp in Andover is high-class, judging by recent reports from that section. J. C. Bacon of Oxford recently shot a buck weighing 150 pounds, B. C. Frost of South Framingham, Mass., captured another weighing 175 pounds, and his companion, Mr. Spaulding from the same section, brought down a doe weighing upwards of 100 pounds.

Geo. R. Stephenson recently got two sheldrakes at North pond.

A few salmon have come out of Thompson's pond, and to Oxford have been three pair on spawning beds in his meadow. It is reported that there are several at "Rocky Dam" spawning.

Frank Palmer and his friend Gammon went to Lovell Monday, and will remain the week out.

"So long as a man can buy a hunting outfit for $15," said a fox hunter the other day, "the farmers can rest easy about any increase in the number of foxes in any given locality. More than two-thirds of all the pelts sold are taken by men who hunt foxes for the sport of the chase. I know a skin buyer who purchased 32 fine pelts from a New York man who came to Maine and began hunting because his city doctor told him he could not live if he stayed indoors. This man assured me that if he counted his cost of board and clothing, his pelts stood him at more than $15 each, but when he was offered $90 for the lot he gladly accepted the terms, saying that the two months of hunting required to secure these 32 skins has saved him more than $500 in doctors' bills, besides giving him some of the keenest sport he had ever enjoyed."

"As a general average one firm alone buys about 70,000 fox pelts this state every year. Of these more than 50,000 are shot while running, leaving less than 20,000 to be captured by trapping and poisoning. Not all the foxes which have been shot while running were taken before the hounds. Some of the best hunters do their killing by what is called the New Hampshire method. Two men go out on snowshoes in midwinter and capture their game by still hunting. This is a way of getting the animals, though few have the patience to follow it with success."

Another way that has proved successful in open, hilly country is to tie up the hounds and let the crows locate the foxes. Early in the morning when the sun is hardly up is the time when foxes eat. Rabbits and mice which have been out over night are then seeking places to sleep and rest, and the squirrels and partridges are sallying forth for a day's work or sport. Between the nocturnal and diurnal animals the fox is very sure of a meal, provided he rises early.

No sooner do the foxes stir abroad than the crows, spying their ancient enemies, begin to follow them up with loud outcries, so that a hunter has but small trouble in creeping up and killing his game, the fox being so engrossed in seeking food and shunning the crows that, for a time, he forgets to keep watch against men, who are his greatest enemies.

Ira Harriman's oldest son was seen last Saturday, with rifle in hand waiting for a deer to show itself in the moose yard below Cold Water brook. Several deer have been seen in that vicinity recently.

A fifty-pound muscang or maskinonge as it is sometimes called, was received, last Friday, at Nash's Trout Mezzo Studio on Cottage street. This fish was captured in Canada and was sent to Mr. Nash to be mounted by H. R. Charlton, advertising manager of the Grand Trunk railway. Its length was 51½ inches and girth 27 inches. It had a big flat head and a mouth full of all sizes of pointed teeth. Mr. Nash is to make two mounts of it by his mezzo process. Its weight was 37½ pounds.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. THE WILY BARBER.
He Has a Clever Way of Beguiling His Customers.

"That man can give me the handicap of a hair cut and then get more money out of a customer than I can, and I always supposed I held the palm among Washington barbers when it came to the financial phase of my profession." This was the remark of an artist of the tonsorial school as he proceeded to entertain and shave one of his "steadies" in a handsomely appointed shop in an uptown hotel and indicating with his lather brush his running name at the next chair. "I'll make the prediction now that it will cost that man just $1.50 before he gets out of his chair," he continued as a customer with every evidence of ready cash and also that of being in a hurry took a seat in the chair of the barber from Chicago, who was the one indicated.

"Just watch how he does it?" "I have just five minutes in which to get a shave," remarked the Chicago barber's customer as he took his seat, and then the "handling" of the artist began. His first remark was, "Oh, I can fix you up in a good shape in that time," and then silence ensued for a space of just three minutes, at the end of which time the hurried customer had been shaved and retouched. Then, glancing at the clock, the barber remarked, "You have just two minutes left, and you could not spend it in a better way than to let me massage your face."

"All right," was the reply, and the customer proceeded to account for his hurry by explaining that he had a dinner engagement for which it was necessary for him to dress.

The manipulation of the muscles of his face by the deft movements of the barber had the desired soothing effect. Five full minutes were spent in this way without a murmur from the customer, who evinced no uneasiness and who was by this time submissive to the master's will. Raising him up in his chair, the barber ran his fingers through the hair of his customer, remarking as he did so: "You really ought to have your hair trimmed. It looks rather stringy around your collar."

The order was given, and in a very brief time the desired trimming had been finished. Then, brushing it down smooth, the barber remarked: "That effect isn't what it ought to be. Your head has the appearance of just being barbered. You had better let me singe the ends of your hair and take off the glossy appearance."

With one glance at the clock, the customer gave the singeing order, and after the burning taper had been applied deftly a significant sniff came from the barber. Then hesitatingly and with an observing inspection he remarked: "That will never do. Your head smells like a tannery. That burned smell will have to be taken away. If you will just step over here to the bowl, I will give you a shampoo in a jiffy, and you will then be in the pink of condition."

After the shampoo, which was assented to, there was not a single thing left for the barber to suggest, as the shop contained no manicuring outfit. The hurried customer had been in the chair of the Chicago barber just twenty-three minutes, and his bill amounted to $1.15.—Washington Star.

Hard to Please.
The stories of the tall and the short and the fat and the lean will accumulate as long as there are people on the planet. A suburban resident had his wife to add to the collection when he reached home one night.

"It's a funny thing," he said, "that particularly stout and particularly thin people can discover insinuations in regard to their size where none is meant."

"Now, tonight in the car there were two good examples of this within a few minutes of each other. One was a little thread of a woman, who opened her eyes in a diabolical stare at two well meaning persons who had moved apart and made a space between them which looked wide enough for her to seat herself in comparative comfort."

"Thank you," she snapped, "but I prefer to stand rather than to sit where there is scarcely room for a child."

"A few minutes later a stout woman—very stout she was, too—entered the car. She looked tired and carried a heavy bag. Three men in a row sprang to their feet as she began to lurch about when the car started. She looked at them as if she would like to bite their heads off."

"Well, I never!" she said. "I guess if it's got to the point where I take up three seats I'd better stand up awhile!" And stand she did all the way."

HARRISON.

Typhoid Fever.

L. Alice Wetherell is sick with typhoid fever at her home in North Harrison. She was engaged to teach the winter term of the Woodsum school, but it was postponed and it was expected that it will open Dec. 1. It is expected that it will open Dec. 1. Miss Wetherell was a graduate of Norway High School.

James H. Stone is sending dry wood to Portland and is getting $6 per cord. Belle Cummings will spend Thanksgiving in Portland with her brother, Milton A. Cummings.

Leonard Barker who has been working for Geo. Carsley during the summer, is now working for Frank Traflet.

Ray Johnson of South Harrison is at work in the woods for Joseph Pitts, and will probably work for him through the winter.

Charles Bennett is stopping at Richard Landoy's in South Harrison. He has a sore hand, having jammed it badly and got cold in it.

Herbert Libby has quite an amount of poplar which was cut and peeled last summer and J. W. Johnson is now saving it into bolts.

The weather has been very mild thus far in November. Up to the 24th nothing has frozen inside of any building that was reasonably enclosed.

Mrs. Alice Wilbur has been sick with a throat trouble and Mrs. Mary Ross has been working for her. She is gaining and hopes to be fully recovered in short time.

Mrs. Chas. H. Pendexter was taken seriously ill in a few days after the birth of her child and for a time was in a precarious condition but is now thought to be out of danger.

J. Howard Randall and wife have been in Portland on a visit and were also present at the marriage of Mr. Randall's brother, Ernest A. Randall of the Randall & McAllister Co.

George S. Pitts has recently had a telephone put into his house in the village. He is on the road most of the time working for the Lister Fertilizer Co., but returns home occasionally.

Matters in Harrison column seemed to be somewhat mixed last week, many names appearing there with which our people were not familiar. Evidently several items strayed into the wrong department.

The season at the corn shop is about closed and the superintendent, Mr. Bennett is now busy engaged in preparing for the coming corn making season. More than the average number will probably be made as a big season's work is looked for next year.

Royal Poland and family are now in Peru where they are caring for Mr. Poland's father, who is sick. They have arranged matters at their farm so that they can remain with the old gentleman as long as he needs their services.

There has been considerable sickness in the home of J. Orrin Ross. Mrs. Ross was sick and had hardly begun to recover when her daughter Marian was taken sick and was confined to her bed for some time. At last accounts she was improving.

Some of the farmers have a quantity of apples on hand which they will be obliged to put into their cellars, as they were unable to procure barrels for them in season to dispose of them until the price dropped. They feel confident that they will get good prices later in the season.

Very busy times at present on our railroad. With the large amount of freight being carried over the road, the regular train and the gravel trains which have been busy, the little road is taxed to its utmost capacity. The business over the road has been unusually large for some weeks.

D. H. Seavey is at home on his farm but will return to Portland about the opening of the term of the Superior court. That will probably end his period of service as court crier, as it is expected the sheriff elect will appoint an entire new set of officials.

Joseph Pitts has a crew at work in the woods a short distance from the village, cutting lumber and preparing for the winter's work. He works with them most of the time, but had the misfortune to sprain his ankle so badly a few days ago that he had to return to home, where he is temporarily confined.

Dr. Sylvester and C. W. Jackson, the dentist who were absent for a week in Kingfield and vicinity, report that they enjoyed their vacation very much but they failed to secure any game. The doctor facetiously observed that the only game which they got was a skunk. There was lots of game in the vicinity and some of the more experienced hunters had good luck.

Eugene Gray of Perley's Mills has been in South Harrison engaged in transporting lumber from the railroad for a cottage on his old farm. The cottage will not be built until next season as Mr. Gray has been so busy working at carpentering and painting that he was unable to erect it this fall. The large part of the lumber is on the spot.

All other schools in town are now in session, with only two changes since the fall term. The Center and Lewis schools have been united and the school is in session at the Center school house in charge of Georgia Sawyer of the Lewis school. Lottie Buck is teaching the Cummings school in place of Mr. Alice Wilbur who resigned at the close of the fall term.

Sidney Johnson, the two-year old son of Eugene Johnson of South Harrison, hurt his arm very badly, and after about a week passed, it was found that the bone was broken and a physician was summoned. The bones were knit together to such an extent that the arm had to be broken again before it could be put in proper shape. The little patient is now doing well.

We learn that Walter A. Ross is negotiating for the lease of the saw mills Perley's Mills in Denmark, and that there is a good prospect that he will be them for a term of years and fit them for business, as there is a probability that he will have a large amount of work during the coming winter. Mr. Ross has had a large experience at mill work and is now working for Scribner Bros.

A part of the Harrison scholars at Bridgton Academy had a little rest last week on account of the absence of Principal Spratt and the assistant teacher, Mr. McCormick. Mr. Spratt was summoned to attend the reunion of the Massachusetts Alumni of B. A., and Mr. McCormick was suddenly called away by the death of a near relative.

Recently some of the classes had to be suspended for a short time.

Seth Keene was on track of the deer and came up in time to help dress it. It weighed 250 pounds. The shoot occurred just over the line in Waterford.

There was quite an excitement at Harrison, last Saturday, over a moose which was seen that morning near Sam Keene's and was also seen by Dan. Chaplain later in the forenoon. Every one who possessed or could borrow a rifle went moose hunting but all returned empty handed.

Their Botany Corrected.

"Look before you leap" was always my motto, said a young clubman the other day, "but since my sister and I changed it to 'Don't leap anyway.'"

"This is how it happened: My sister and I have both dabbled a bit in botany, and we thought we had the names of the blue orchids you find in the White Mountains (that is, you find them if you're lucky enough) down pat."

"One day we drifted into Gorham and went for dinner to a little hotel in the main street that looked rather homelike and attractive. On the long table where we had seats stood a vase with not one or two, but dozens of these orchids in it."

"That should have aroused our suspicions, but it didn't. Looking around us we saw no one who seemed at all likely to question the statement, so my sister remarked to me:

"What a lovely vaseful of habenerias fimbriata!"

"Yes," said I, as if that was our everyday fashion of speech.

"But the word was hardly out of my mouth when an old man opposite us, whose coat hadn't been brushed, apparently, since it left the tailor's at least a dozen years before, and whose long unkempt beard concealed what I know now must have been the 'fine chin' which the novelists mention, said blandly:

"Those orchids before you, my young friends, belong to the cyodes variety, and not to the one you have mentioned. If you notice more carefully you will see that they are a trifle smaller and lighter in color than a habeneria fimbriata."

"The rest of the company regarded the old man as if he were their new-found champion, my sister bottled her indignation at being addressed as his young friend, and we paid what we could on the matter. But I don't think any more chances." [New York Tribune.

A College Education.

A recent statement by Wm. E. Curtis in the Chicago-Record Herald, to the effect that a prominent business firm in that city is anxious to obtain college-bred men, has brought forth a letter from an Illinois clergyman to Mr. Curtis in which the former asks whether the firm will pay the college-bred men salaries which will justify them in accepting the positions offered. The Illinois clergyman says:

"A young man who has paid $5,000 for his education cannot afford to accept a meager salary."

In response to this inquiry and statement of what the college-bred young man thinks he can afford to do, Mr. Curtis asserts his belief that every young man who can should go through college; that duties which require skill, judgment and experience can be more readily acquired by a college-bred man than by one who lacks education, but that employers cannot afford to pay large salaries until their employees develop a usefulness commensurate with liberal recompense.

These deductions are so plain that the arguments and instances which Mr. Curtis supplies in support of them seem superfluous. Nevertheless, as the clergyman's letter, from which an extract is quoted, shows there is often noted in young men with a good education a disposition to refrain from accepting a start in some promising field when another less promising in the end pays better at first.

The lesson that the general education furnished in schools is only of practical help, except in limited fields when supplemented by special training, is one which is more generally appreciated now than ever before. Perhaps the greatest difficulty is not to get the college man to start, but to impress upon the youth of the land the value of acquiring all the general information that can be before devoting themselves to a particular calling. It is only after he has served his apprenticeship in his new field that the college man begins to feel the practical benefit of his college work. It is not the fast initial spurt that wins the long race.

Annual Roll Call.

The roll call and supper that has come to be an interesting and valuable feature of the church life was held at the Congregational vestry Thursday evening. About eighty members sat down to the tables where a circle supper was served.

After the appetite had been satisfied, the pastor, Rev. S. R. Riddout, began calling the roll of members, those present responding to their names. A number of absent ones sent letters telling of their regrets at not being able to be present and giving an encouraging word.

Reports were given of the Young People's Society by president H. L. Plummer, of the work and needs of the Juniors, by the pastor who is the Junior superintendent. Superintendent E. N. Sweet spoke for the Sunday school, making a plea for a larger support by the church members. H. L. Horne, clerk and treasurer called attention to the financial needs and spoke of the pledge system. Cards were circulated and generally signed.

The pastor gave some reminiscences of the fifteen years he has been with the church. There are now 180 members, 129 resident and 51 absent. In the 15 years 113 have united with the church, the past few years averaging ten each year.

The matter of observing the anniversary was brought up. It was favorably considered and plans informally made for the celebration. Business of appointing committees was deferred to the next Tuesday prayermeeting session as well as some other unfinished business.

Holmes' notes ten cents per dozen. Send to this office.

We have good maps of this county and sell them for 25 and 50 cents each. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

F. H. Kidder of Boston, traveling salesman for Asa Cushman & Co. of Auburn, spent the Sabbath in town as the guest of A. F. Marston.

Union Thanksgiving services will be held at the Baptist church, Thursday evening at 7.30. All the churches unite and all are cordially invited to attend.

Norway High School, class 1903, have got their class rings. They are very pretty gold rings with the year on scroll. They got them at Cole's Jewelry Store.

Mrs. Myron Bettes of Lyon, Mrs. H. M. Wells and Mrs. E. B. Kearney's sister-in-law, died of cancer, Friday. A year ago this summer, Mr. and Mrs. Bettes were in Norway for two weeks.

I. N. Small is improving every day and will probably be seen on the street this week. He has been under the professional nursing of Edwina Morgan, who has had large experience in that line.

Geo. W. Carter of Norway and Lewis Pomroy of Somerville, Mass., recently returned from a week's moose hunt at Cushman's Camps on Katahdin Lake. They saw several moose, but did not get a chance to kill one. They report deer to be scarce and wild, as well they might be, as there were 64 hunters in the woods in that vicinity.

Mrs. Helen Crocker shows us a facsimile of a copy of the New England Current printed in Boston and sold by Benjamin Franklin on Queen street. This was No. 30 of the paper and gave the news "from Monday, February 4, to Monday, Feb. 11, 1723." It was a two-column, one-page paper, 12x8 inches. It has the long 2. Among the news is "His Majesty's most gracious speech to both Houses of Parliament, on Thursday, Oct. 11, 1722." The advertisements are not set in display type.

BULBS IN WINTER QUARTERS.

Nearly all the flowering bulbs go through a period of probation. They must be set away in some dark place to form root mass before their leaves turn green. The freest, rias and a few others are exceptions to the rule. These should be left under conservatory benches or in some cold frame until both leaves and roots have made a fair growth when they may be placed in a cool room to form their flowers.

The cellar is a convenient "dark room" for bulbs, but if it is heated by a furnace it is better to try a dark, cool closet, or to leave the pots standing in some corner of the yard, protected from light and frost by a covering of leaves.

The chrysalis stage lasts from six to eight weeks, and then is you bring up into the light only a few pots at a time, at intervals of about three weeks, you can be practically sure of a gay succession of flowers. In a rather low temperature bulb flowers develop more slowly, are finer and last longer. The sifting room is usually too warm. The window of some cool room heated only from the hall, where they can have plenty of light and air, is a better place for them. They thrive with but little sun, but need plenty of water while their flowers are forming.

Why Not Own a Home?

New Thoughts on an Old Subject.

Why has there been building going on all summer in every village near us, while in our town there can hardly be called to mind a single complete home. Is it because there is no demand? Is it because we employ no people? What town is there near us that has a larger working population? I know of none. Why do not more people build homes for themselves and hire less? Why not have a home and pay rent to yourself? Did you not know it was more profitable? Did you, who have been hiring rents for the last decade, not know that you would own your own home if you had bought or built at first? Did you not know houses were let for profit and you have to pay it? Why not pay this profit to yourself? What if you should leave town some time, is there any objection to owning some property? You say taxes and insurance are high. Possibly, but if you hire cents who pay them if you do not? As a proposition we will say a home costs $1200.00.

Taxes... $24.00
Insurance per year... $3.00
Repairs (say 2 per cent)... $24.00

You will pay a rental of not less than eight dollars per month, giving a net profit to owner of $96.00 less $52.00 or $44.00 on the right side of the ledger.

Now will this not pay any one who cares for a home and be entirely free from any interference of a home of your own, which can be easily paid for by simply depositing what you would have to pay for rent.

Why not build more? Do not give it all to the other fellow. WM. C. LEAVITT.

Nature Study Not a New Fad.

Nature Study is the oldest study in the world, for what else could Adam and Eve have found to study in that wonderful garden? And yet, 'tis only within a few years that the country has been flooded with books and matter upon "Nature Studies," just as though a new study had just been introduced. And the poor teachers sigh as another burden is added to their heavy load.

But that is only following the latest theory of education, that of teaching practical and useful things, and training the eyes and hands, instead of putting so much time upon dead languages and other studies never used outside of the schoolroom.

I will just take a little while to tell you of a little of the work done in Maine where it is being rapidly introduced. The Agricultural College at Kingston, R. I., as well as Cornell issue monthly Nature Leaflets to be used in schools and homes. There are now several Nature Bands in Maine under the direction of one or the other of these colleges.

About three years ago, we organized a little band at home called The Buckle Nature Band, under the direction of Kingston. Flowers, different organs and uses, methods of pollination and relations to insects were investigated and leaves and their uses studied.

Birds are perhaps the most fascinating branch of Nature Study to most of people and the most difficult.

To a person who knows nothing of birds it is a revelation to take a walk in June with a good ornithologist. The student will hear a note or catch a bit of color, or spy a nest where the uninitiated would hear and see nothing. Such people gain an exquisite pleasure in walking and riding that no one else can imagine. This is just what Nature Studies will do, open our eyes and ears to the beauties about us.

It is of practical value to learn what kind of birds will destroy the most harmful insects. The more birds we have about us the better off we are.

The mulberry tree is valuable for shade, for poultry and birds. It is wonderful what an amount of fruit even a small tree will bear, and the fruit is really good for the table. I set out a little tree not over two feet high, on my mother's farm thirteen years ago last spring, and this year it is a handsome shade tree and has been loaded with fruit.

One can have no idea of the beauty and variety of our native flowers, shrubs and trees until they make a study of them.

This spring I offered two books as prizes to the scholars in our district school who would find the two greatest varieties of wild flowers and bring into school the first one of each variety. School began in April and closed the last of June. The one who gained the first prize found 140 varieties and the second some over 50 kinds.

Maine has a wonderful variety of wild flowers unknown to most people except the real flower lovers.

It is not wild flowers alone which I would advocate teaching. It is not every farmer's boy or farmer himself who knows that the perfect flower must have both stamens and pistils, and that sometimes these essential organs are found in separate blossoms and on separate plants. I know a man who set out a fine strawberry bed which grew handsomely and bore many berries, but no fruit and he did not know what was the matter till some one told him they were all staminate blossoms.

Some people wonder why more of the cucumber and squash blossoms do not set, because they do not see them of two kinds of blossoms. Take the children into the garden with you and show them the importance of the corn tassel as it sheds its pollen down upon the silk of the ear, and explain that not a single kernel of corn will grow without the pollen. Explain how the bees and turkeys, etc., are storing up food in their roots for another year's growth, which we appropriate for ourselves.

How many people know that we would be a great deal richer if it was not for a dainty little green-winged insect, called the Lace Winged Fly, whose larvae are called aphids-lions, and they are truly lions among the aphids. We are all the time talking about how to destroy the insect pests, and yet we can't expect the school teachers to teach our children all these things and it wouldn't do them much good if they did. The object is to once get the children interested, and to form the habit of observation and investigation, and then furnish them with proper reference books to help them out. A few choice books of good authority are of untold value.

Then we must take time to go out to Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequalled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular. "I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kumpfe.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness." —Miss FANNIE KUMPF, 1923 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900).

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

play with them once in a while ourselves. Let the men eat a cold lunch once in a while, and let the women picnic down to the brook or off in the woods. It will do her as much good as the little ones.

I am often asked how I get time. I have learned by experience that many things are not essential, which I used to think must be done.

Men can run the washing machine. Press all clothes but starched ones. That two plain dresses will do where four ruffled ones used to.

Buy many clothes ready made. Cook plainer food and less pastry. Good bread and butter and fruit is more nutritious and less work than pies.

Children can do much work you would not think possible, and enjoy it, with something to look forward to.

Children help do Saturday morning's work that I may go with them later. That a Nature Band is worth more than a literary club.

That school has no time for mischief when interested in Nature Studies. Best of all it strengthens character to help make children love the farm, and form a taste for scientific study.

It is in these out-of-the-way we come nearer to God and see His hand in all things. —[Read by Mrs. V. P. Foster of Bethel at the Maine Pomological meeting at Farmington.

The Last Fly of Summer.

Written for the Advertiser. 'Tis the last fly of summer fast glued to the pane. We look for its frisky companions in vain. No flies of its kind are hovering high. For the regions departed we give not one sigh. We gladly dispense with their din and their noise. Which much of the pleasure of summer destroys. Perhaps flies are needful, and we have a doubt if the plan of creation were perfect without. But too much of a good thing is a nuisance becomes. And we look with dismay on our fly-bespeckled rooms. Your mission is ended, poor desolate fly! Jack Frost has arrived, he will help you to die. East Stoneham, Me. F. E. S.

EAST WATERFORD.

Know What They Want. As to R. E. D., which our good friends at Harrison are so anxious to push upon us, we have little to say, except that as matters now appear, we don't want it, as we are quite sure it must delay our mail matter for at least 24 hours. We are perfectly satisfied with the service as it is, as we can now mail to Lewiston or Portland and receive answers the same day. We think we scent the cat under the meal, and that Harrison has an ax to grind. The powers that be may s'er long push it upon us all, if the department makes a saving by the system, as we are informed. If so, we submit, of course, and then we prefer Norway to Harrison for distribution. As our knowledge of these matters is quite limited, we beg to be corrected if wrong in our statements, as the expression of honest opinion is guaranteed to every live born Yankee.

His term expired last June, and since that time he has been in the West. His mother died about a year ago, and he will only be greeted by his father, F. W. Thomas, a boat-builder, and an older brother, who is married and who also lives in Andover.

They Talk Like Josephine. The smart girl of today is just as desirous for novelty in speech as she is for a new idea in dress or in the decoration of her home, so she has gone back to the time of Josephine and the empire gowns for her latest conversational effort. It was during the days of the unfortunate empress that the expression "Look at her lines" originated and was considered as the correct ejaculation when an elegant or grotesque figure crossed the speaker's field of vision, the clinging draperies which Josephine made popular accentuating beauties or deformities hitherto concealed.

Wildarts, she has adopted the catchword of the first empire, and now at a tea, reception, theater or wherever fair women are gathered together the staccato monosyllables, "Look at her lines," or some one of the numerous paraphrases, as "Have you noticed Mrs. Blank's lines?" is to be heard on all sides.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Famous Yachtswomen. Of American society was fairly legion. The two most prominent, so far as records go, are Mrs. J. W. Martinez Cardaza and Susan de Forest Day-Parker.

The former owns the steam yacht Eleanor, whose lines are familiar to port wardens and pilots the world over. It is an ideal yacht of the largest size, being 232 feet over all, 32 beam and 15 draft.

Mrs. Cardaza's favorite cruise is from Philadelphia or New York to Newfoundland, where she has a hunting lodge in the middle of a noble wilderness.

The record of the steam yacht Scythian, which was owned and commanded by Susan de Forest Day-Parker, is familiar to all yachtsmen. One of her cruises was truly remarkable for the number of places visited and the distance covered inside of three months.—Margherita Arlina Hamm in Woman's Home Companion.

The Sultan Against Education. The sultan's decree that Turkish children shall not be educated in "the foreign way" any longer and that Turkish women shall not be allowed to have Christian companions has been received with different feelings, it is said. Several high officials are deeply displeased by the order, but one highly educated woman of rank, wife of a dignitary, is quoted as saying that her own experience had convinced her that it was much better to have no education than to learn what life might be yet have to spend it in a harem. She had refused therefore to allow her own daughters to be educated as she had been and regards the sultan's decree as a wise one.

Retired on a Pension. Mrs. Augusta Church of Buffalo, who has been matron at police headquarters in that city for several years and who, through sickness, has become incapacitated for service, has become retired, and will draw $25 a month salary during the remainder of her life. The police commissioners appointed Miss Anna S. Walter to be her successor. Miss Walter stands at the head of the civil service list. The salary is $800 per year. Miss Walter has had valuable experience in this line of work.

Marking Handkerchiefs. A young woman has occupied some of her summer leisure in marking a dozen hemstitched linen handkerchiefs intended as a Christmas gift in a novel way. From the original signature of the future owner of the articles she has traced duplicates on the linen, copying each afterward with the finest of black working cotton such as is used to outline designs in fine dollies. The handkerchiefs are men's size and might be for her father or her brother, but are, in fact, for neither.—Harper's Bazar.

Honors in Law. Miss Alice H. Day of Batavia, N. Y., was the only woman graduated in the law department of the University of Buffalo. Because she had not taken her whole course in that institution she was disqualified from taking the second scholarship prize, which she had won. It was awarded to the man next below her in rank, but who had the good fortune to be in the university long enough to entitle him to honors.

Aunt Sarah Edwards is in poor health. Her age is 86. She still lives alone, as she has done for many years.

Mrs. E. B. Jilison and son George are visiting friends in Boston. Mrs. Nettie Jordan is keeping house during their absence.

James Edwards is suffering from a severe stomach trouble, which baffles the skill of the most eminent physicians. Opinions are divided between gall-stones and cancer.

Dominicus Edwards picked 3,800 bushels of apples. He has built a frost-proof storehouse, and as they are mostly of the Ben Davis variety, he will probably not sell before spring.

Hundreds of bushels of cider apples still remain unpicked, the ground being entirely covered in places. People are so driven with other work as to consider them of small value.

Frank Morse has purchased the farm on Mayberry hill, formerly owned by his wife's great-grandfather, Wm. Edwards, and is building a house with the intention of moving there in the early spring. Edwin Jilison is doing the job.

Harvest of Christmas Trees. The annual harvest of Christmas trees has commenced and from noon on until within a few days of Christmas, sapling fir trees all the way from six to 18 or 20 feet in height will be shipped to the wholesale dealers in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

Manure from the great number of Christmas trees used in the eastern portion of the country. This fall it is expected that nearly 1,000,000 will be sent.

The work of cutting the trees and tying them into bundles has been ready to commence and those who have large orders to fill do not get through their work before Dec. 15, by which time the last of the trees must be on the way to market. During the next few weeks, probably 500 men, women and children will find employment here in Maine in the Christmas tree industry.

To supply these trees more than 1,000 acres of Maine woodland will be gone over. When the work is finished and all the bills have been paid, the people of the state will be nearly $100,000 richer than before. The contractors pay from three to four cents for the small trees and from 25 to 35 cents for the larger and more symmetrical ones, delivered at the steamboat wharves and railroad stations. After paying the freight to the place of destination they realize about 25 per cent on the transaction.
